Beauty In Appomattox County

Snow clinging to young pine trees and underbrush makes a beautiful winter scene in Appomattox County after area's second snow fall hit here Monday.

WILSON NAMED CHAIRMAN

Pork Producers Schedule Services, Market Survey

The Board of Directors of the Piedmont Pork Producers Association approved a request by board member John Wilson to conduct a survey in the 10 county region encompassed by the association to determine future availability of supplies, and services and future market potential.

The directors appointed a five man study committee which will decide what areas of marketing and services needs the most attention and assign priorities to the survey team which will be headed by Dr. Ewing Wilson of the VPI Department of Agriculture.

Wilson, of Appomattox, will serve as chairman of the Study Committee while Henry Wood of Buckingham, Jim Molier of Amelia, Albert Watts of Lunenburg and Franklin Dodd of Charlotte Court House will serve as members.

The meeting held at the Appomattox County VPI Cooperative Extension Office was attended by more than 20 board members, extension agents and officials from VPI.

In making his request for a survey Wilson said, "Traditionally the Piedmont region has not been a good pork producing area. There is not enough feed grain grown, most essential services are not available, and prior to the forming of this association the market was not adequate.

"Through the efforts of the association and the extension agents in our area we have been able to raise the market value of our hogs and stimulate competition among the buyers, but we still do not have the supplies and services required to produce swine economically," Wilson added.

Dr. Milton Wise, head of the Animal Science Department at VPI, said, "When a survey such as this is completed, the organizaiton must be able to accept the results. They may not be positive, and you must then take the information and put it to positive use."

Wilson cited the lack of large scale feed grain producers and the lack of feeding equipment available in this area as major problems. Also singled out as a problem was the shortage of veterinarian services available.

The survey is expected to determe if it is feasible to encourage grain producers to begin large scale production of swine feed grain, and to see if there is sufficient recuring demand for equipment suppliers to increase their operation.

Wilson said, "What we really want to know is if we can grow and market hogs at a profit. The cost of raising swine is almost prohibitive right now because we do not have supplies and services available to us locally."

The study committee will also determine the financial obligation incurred by the survey, and develop a time frame for completion.

President Assesses S & L Firm

"Many changes have taken place in the Savings and Loan Industry during 1974, and many more are ahead," Jack Cosby, President of Lynchburg Federal Savings and Loan Association, said recently in his report to the members and Board of Directors at the annual members' meeting held at the Main Office, 615 Church Street, Lynchburg.

Shaking itself free of a sharp savings out-flow, the industry has enjoyed a turn-about in this area. The hope is that the trend will continue, permitting increased mortgage lending activity.

"Your association, in spite of some months of severe savings withdrawal, showed a net gain of 7½ over 1973. Loan activity was also strong, especially in view of the general slowdown caused by rate-conscious borbowers," Cosby said.

Lynchburg Federal said to savers $3,720,251.31 in interest during 1974, the largest amount in the history of the association.

Spring Fertilizer Price Rise Predicted

Farmers may pay 10 to 15 percent more for fertilizer this planting seaon over fall 1974 prices," said James R. Ford, Jr., Chairman of the Appomattox County ASC Committee. "Such a price advance - - far less than the doubling of a year earlier - - may signal the end of the price spiral, according to a recent report of USDA's Economic Research Service."

Fertilizer supplies fell short of demand in 1974. Despite tight supplies and high prices, the U.S. farmers used record amounts - - 47 million tons - - of fertilizer on their fields, 9 percent or 4 million tons more than in 1973. On a plant nutrient basis, the rise was 7 percent.

"The report also shows that farmers fertilized more acres with both more gross tonnage and more plant nutrients last year than in 1973," continued Mr. Ford. "They fertilized 360 million acres, compared with 354 million in 1973, using 91 pounds of primary plant nutrients per acre, compared with 1973's 87 pounds."

High nitrogen fertilizers purchased in the coming spring may cost 10 to 15 percent more than those for the fall of 1974. The average price for ammonia may retail at about $250 per ton.

Between mid-April 1973 and 1974, ammonia prices jumped from $87.60 to $183 per ton. This rise of 110 percent was followed by a 25 percent rise to $229 per ton by mid-September 1974.

The key to prices for ammonia and other fertilizers containing nitrogen is corn acreage, because over one-third of nitrogen fertilizers go on corn," Ford added.

Although other materials such as ammonium nitrate, ammonium sulfate, and nitrogen solutions may also rise 10 to 15 percent, urea prices remain very difficult to assess. Urea is also used as a protein feed supplement and in industry. The supply has been short of demand. However, enough urea looks available to slow the price rise of fertilizers containing appreciable quantities of it.

"As for phosphate prices," said Mr. Ford, "they doubled over the 18 months between April 1973 and September 1974." Phosphate prices may average 10 percent higher during 1975 than those of the previous year, however, they may average higher during the spring planting season when demand is high.

Potash fertilizer prices advanced least of the primary plant nutrients. Supplies will likely be tight in 1975 because demand has risen and no new mines have opened or are likely to open in the United States or Canada.

Local Banks Support Conservation Project

Two local banking institutions have joined forces with the Appomattox Garden Club to help introduce conservation into the Appomattox County Public School system. R. E. Lee Christian Academy and the Public Library.

Fidelity National Bank and Farmers National Bank has furnished financial aid to the Garden Club in its project which entails the placing of 40 conservation booklets, "A Teachers Curriculum Guide to Conservation Education" in class rooms for study in grades kindergarten through third.

A statewide project of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, the booklets are being distributed in an effort to introduce younger children to conservation.

Mrs. Martin Webb and Mrs. Lloyd Walton are the co-chairmen of the project for the Appomattox Garden Club. Mrs. Walton says this will be a continuing project with more booklets being supplied to the higher levels in the coming years.

The series of booklets range in scope and content to make interesting reading for students from the kindergarten level through high school and young adulthood. The project has been endorsed by the Virginia Department of Education and Mrs. Webb says that in the future other businesses and industries will be contacted to help finance the project.

Mrs. Lane said that the Central Virginia Branch is making plans to conduct a public forum in March and will conduct fund raising activity in May.

Campaign Goal Listed By Heart Association

The Appomattox County Heart Association has announced a 1975 campaign goal of $3,000.00. The Heart Fund drive will be conducted nationwide and in Appomattox during February.

Thomas L. Matthews, Heart Fund campaign chairman, said the money collected will support research, education and community programs sponsored by the Appomattox Heart Association.

"The number of deaths caused by heart and blood vessel diseases - particularly heart attacks, stroke - is overwhelming," Matthews said. "They claim over a million lives a year. Heart attack alone will kill more than 680,000 persons this year.

"The Appomattox Heart Association is working to reduce these deaths. Research is unraveling some of the mysteries which eventually will lead to new methods of treatment and prevention and, hopefully, cures. Educational and community programs are being held here and across the country to make residents aware of heart disease and provide up-to-date, heart-saving information."

Matthews added that although the American Heart Association has scored major achievements in combating the nation's No. One killers, more help is needed to reduce the death toll due to cardiovascular diseases.

Local volunteers will visit area homes in February to distribute educational literature and collect funds to support the work of the Heart Association.
